We are delighted to announce that all articles accepted for publication in the Journal of Germanic Linguistics from 1 December 2025 will be 'open access'; published with a Creative Commons (https://www.cambridge.org/core/open-research/creative-commons-licenses) licence and freely available to read online (see the journal's Open Access Options (https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/journal-of-germanic-linguistics/information/journal-policies/open-access-options) page for available licence options).

We have an OA option for every author: the costs of open access publication will be covered through agreements between the publisher and the author's institution, (https://www.cambridge.org/core/services/open-access-policies/read-and-publish-agreements) payment of APCs for those with third-party funding, or else waived entirely, ensuring every author can publish and enjoy the benefits of OA.

Please see the journal's Open Access Options (https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/journal-of-germanic-linguistics) page for instructions on how to request an APC waiver.

See this FAQ (https://www.cambridge.org/core/services/open-research-initiatives/oa-journal-flip-faqs) for more information.

Editorial board

The Journal of Germanic Linguistics (JGL), published for the Society for Germanic Linguistics (SGL) and the Forum for the Society for Germanic Language Studies (FGLS), is an open access journal that carries original articles, reviews, and notes on synchronic and diachronic issues pertaining to Germanic languages and dialects from the earliest phases to the present, including English (to 1500) and the extraterritorial varieties. Contributions are invited on the phonological, morphological, syntactic, and semantic analysis of these languages and dialects, as well as their historical development, both linguistic and textual. Especially welcome are contributions that address questions of interest to a broad range of scholars concerned with general issues in formal theory, sociolinguistics, and psycholinguistics. The language of publication is normally English, though manuscripts in German will be considered.
